went down to Casaca some time since, ware it is whispered about, he has been assassinated by the followers of the Gotalro, who was alsn's at the palace gates in Yedo at the insignation of old Prince Mito, his father. This gate in Illustrates the "blood feud" as it obtains in Japan to this day. The Trecom with whom Mr. Harris effected his treaty died suddenly—made way with, as is generally believed by Prince Mito, who then hoped to scenre the succession in the person of his son, this same Stotsbashi. But the Council of Daimios, choosing otherwise, selected the present Emperor, a young scion of the honse of Kishiu. The Gotairo was elected Regent during the young Prince's minerity. Mito, on account of the suspicion of complicity with the late Emperor's death, was, by the active infinence of the Gotairo or Regent, confined a prisoner of State to his own house, and the family disgraced. Mito's followers took fearful revenge, in the summer of 1860, by the assassination of the Gotairo under the citadel walls as he was returning from Court, surranded by his followers. This murder while depressing the influence of the Gotairo's family, again elevated that of Mito, who belonged to the Concervative or anti-foreign party, as the Gotairo did to the progressive party. Owing to the reaction against the progressive party, the family of Mito has gradually gained position and Influence until during the grave troubles of this year in early summer. Stotbashi was made actual regent though not taking that title, which has continued vacant since the Gotalro's death. With the Tends of these rival families and parties the foreigners have unfortunately been involved, and Stotabashi

The Government at Yedo have at last moved to some jurpose against the fonins, who have been lopping off heads of those who sold slik, lackerware or chickens to foreigners, at their own savage will. Numerous arrests have been effected at Yedo; twenty-eight having been seized in a single night. It is interesting to know that these arrests were made by a temporary police under the stimulus of high rewards offered. These arrests lawe given a little more confidence to the greatly infinitistical nadive traders who had began to arm themselves with foreign revolvers for self defence. Still the country is in a deplorably unactited state, and trade in guishes therefor.
